

If Intellectual Property Is Vital To Your Organisation, Could IP Theft Cause You Serious Damage?

In this era of corporate fraud, deceptive internet practices, brand and identity theft and escalating litigation, preserving and protecting what you or your organisation has created is vital.

The commercial landscape is littered with organisations and individuals that have failed because they neglected to take a legal course of action which would have resulted in their protection. This proves that it is simply not enough for you or your company to assume that your existing law firm has done all that is necessary to secure your intellectual property.

To ensure the proper protection, to safeguard your continued success and to secure your very commercial existence, you need the legal counsel of a firm with the expertise to skillfully steer through the maze of implications and ramifications that make up intellectual property law.

CG Lawyers is an established law firm which specialises in the practice of trade mark, copyright and corporate law. The firm's principal Cara Ghassemian has practised with integrity and sincerity for over 20 years. CG Lawyers' many successes and achievements in intellectual property mediation and litigation, as well as its outstanding and unique approach to the client/lawyer relationship, has earned the firm numerous accolades from clients across a broad range of industry classifications.

As a boutique corporate law firm, CG Lawyers provides a level of personal service unattainable at the larger firms, but with all the professional and technical systems in place that you would expect to find at the most advanced legal establishments. Additionally, routine access to the principal is the norm rather than the exception.
